Our industry's sales executives make their living working as independent contractors paid on commission. As such, many in our industry view tax season as especially intimidating and frustrating. Whether you are seasoned account executive with an expert CPA; or new to the business and not sure where to begin with tax preparation – this month's professional development luncheon is a must. Attorney, Dan Price will speak to best business practices throughout your career to be successful, prepared and within the guidelines of business and tax law.

Price is an Associate at Stone Loughlin & Swanson, LLP Law Firm in Austin and a leader in our community. He will speak about how to be prepared with the correct information to fully optimize your tax return. This will include practices that you can implement throughout the year as well as tips on how to gather the correct resources if you are feeling underprepared in filing your 2010 returns.

You can follow Dan Price on Twitter @D_J_Price.

It's the season for new beginnings! Check out our new, secure shopping cart at <http://awmaustin.org/luncheons> to pre-pay for the January luncheon!
